DocuLogix Issues White Paper, “The Business of Litigation Support”

White paper offers guidance on establishing and managing a litigation support company.

DALLAS, TX, Jan. 5, 2008 – DocuLogix, LLC today announced that it was making its white paper, “The Business of Litigation Support” available on the DocuLogix website <http://budurl.com/prBusinessOfLitSupt>. Written by Terry Vaughan a 20+ year veteran of the litigation support business, the white paper features articles of interest to owners and managers of litigation support company, including:

- “Money on the Table: Project Tracking for Litigation for Litigation Support” – describes the rationale for the development of a project tracking system specifically for litigation support in order to be able to provide clients with up-to-the-minute status, track associated costs and revenue, and measure and reward staff.
- “Reading for Profit: the Great Game of Business” – a review of the book detailing the long-time management philosophy of Jack Stack, a philosophy that provided the underpinnings to the early success of NightRider and IKON.
- “Starting or Locating a Litigation Support Company” – specific items to look out for when selecting locations, hardware and staff.
- “QuickBooks for Litigation Support Companies” – advice on setting up QuickBooks for a litigation support company, including a listing of the general revenue categories as well as specific service offerings that are used to track expenses and revenue at Litigation Solution, Inc.

The white paper is intended to be of value to existing companies as well as newly-formed companies or divisions offering litigation support services.
